

Two versions of the Strategic Decision Making (SDM) Exam

For Fall 2013 and Spring 2014 there will be two versions of this exam. Note that in the transition effective July 1, 2013 candidates who have passed either the AFE exam or both the ERM and AdvF exams receive credit for this exam.

Part B

Candidates who do not have transition credit for the SDM exam but have passed the Advanced Finance (AdvF) transitional exam must take this version. It is a three-hour exam given in the morning and will have the same questions as the morning session for those taking the complete exam. Starting in Fall 2014 only the complete SDM exam will be given. Hence, candidates who do not pass Part B by then will lose the transition credit and must take the complete exam.

Complete

All other candidates must take the complete five-hour SDM exam. The exam will be passed or failed in its entirety. That is, candidates whose total score for the exam is below the pass mark but whose score for the morning questions is above the pass mark set for candidates taking only Part B will not receive any credit.
